One of the most intimate companions of my childhood, and one whom I took care of till he died. Was a boy of about my cown age, who had been given to me by my grandfather, not as a slave, but as a playmate and companion to take care of me, being older. If ever one child loved another, that boy loved me and I loved him, and never were more sincere tears shed than I shed over him.

A BIG WASTE TO KEEP UP THE SURPLUS SCARE.

Secretary Fairchild has raised his limit for the purchase of United States 4 per cent bonds to 130, and at that figure has just bought 26,340,350 of them. In January last the Secretary could have purchased these bonds at from 125 to 126. In the same mouth of January he deposited with certain favored National banks $30,000,000 and upward of public money free of interest, with which he could have bought 24,000,000 aftoods. Adding to the 130 he is now paying for them the 2 per cent interest paid since January, brings their cost to the Government up to 132, as against say 126, which the cost would have been if he had bought them in January, Here is a dead loss to the National Treasury of 6 per cent on 168 to 160,000, or $1,440,000, and a corresponding profit to the banks which bought the bonds and pleaged them to the Treasury. This night have been wolded, and could have been avoided by the exercise of a little common sense. What says the President?

General Superintendent Flagg emphatically denied the sensational phases of the stories and declared yesterday that the loss to the company was trivial He also denied that there had been an extensive lop ping off of heads by the company, or that any revolution in the accounting methods of the company was contemplated. The early discovery of the attempt to defraud the company was a testimony to the excel-nce of the existing auditing system. The swindling was done by the chief check clerk, a young man named Smith, who issued duplicates of scheme would turn into the office the untouched duplicates received from Smith, indicating that the seats were not occupied, while they pocketed the money received and divided it with the conspirator in the office of the company. This thieving had gone in the office of the company. This thieving had gone on but a short time, when the auditing system above Smith's office discovered evidence of the irregularity, which was promptly investigated and stopped.

Smith was discharged and is supposed to have left the city, and several of the conductors who were under suspicion of working with him were suspended pending further investigation. It is claimed that $100 will cover the amounts lost through this scheme, and Mr. Flagg is confident that the rascality involves only a trifling number of conductors or other employes.

A RELIEF FROM TRYING LABORS. ONLY THREE RECEPTION DAYS A WEEK HERE AFTER-EXTEMPORE SPEECHES.

IRT TRUNGRAPH TO THE TR' HINE ! Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 24 (Special).-General Harrison had an opportunity to rest to-day, and to get as nearly as possible the full benefit of it he spent the afternoon away from home, visiting Republican state headquarters, his law office and one or two other places that he is in the habit of frequenting. As usual, wherever he went a crowd of friends soon gathered, but, as they were merciful enough not to call for a speech, afternoon was one of rest and relief for him. There were many callers at the house, a large number of them coming while he was downtown. Among those received by General Harrison Congressman Conger. It has become apparent to General Harrison's friends that it is throwing too much of a strain upon him to permit delegations to flow in upon him continuously, and it has been determined to have only three reception days each week after this month. The handshaking, although a trying ordeal, can be endured easily, but the demand for speeches, numbering as many as four on some days, is simply unreasonable. Yet, under the pressure of circumstances, he has several times delivered pleasing and pointed addresses, eliciting the highest praise, when, as he has afterward confessed, he really did not know up to the moment of beginning to speak what he should say. This was the case last week, when he addressed a crowd from Iroquois County, Ill., and Laporte County, Ind., giving utterance to what many regarded as the most forcible speech he has delivered. As he alighted from his carriage at University Park, where the visitors had assembled he remarked to a member of his family: "Well, really I don't know what to say to these people to-day." However, the speech was notably a new and most effectively pointed presentation of ideas that he has expressed repeatedly, in his endeavors to impress upon his hearers the few really important issues of the campaign. when, as he has afterward confessed, he really

The motion will be opposed by the directors and general rtgage bondholders of the company on the ground that the six months after default in the payment of interest on the bends have not expired and that under the lease to the Missouri Pacific the property is being managed at present in the interest of the owners. They will not present a nomination if the court thinks a receivership desirable, but they hope for further time for a peaceable reorganization of the

ATTENDED BY PEOPLE DISTINGUISHED IN MANY WALKS OF LIFE.

oston, Sept. 24 (Special).-The funeral of William Warren, the comedian, occurred at noon to-day. The services were held in Trinity Church, which was densely crowded, while many sought in vain for mission. Every walk of life had contributed its quota of sincere mourners. At noon the coffin was borne up the centre aisle

by the following pall bearers: Colonel Henry Lee, B. P. Cheney, John G. Gilbert, C. W. Couldock, Joseph Proctor, Charles Barron, Eugene Tompkins, Dr. S. A. Green, Captain Nathan Appleton, C. Leslie Aller Immediately following the casket came the relatives of the dead man, Mrs. J. B. Rice, of Chicago, a sister; Mrs. Orson Smith, Mrs. George L. Dunlap, of New-York, and Mrs. Treville, of Philadelphia, nieces; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jefferson, and their sons, Charles and James. As they went toward the chancel rail, the Rev. Phillips Brooks, who moved at the head, began the Episcopal service, opening with the words: "I am the resurrection and the life." On reaching the space in front of the rail, the coffin was placed in the centre, surmounted and surrou with great massings of floral remembrances. In keeping with the rule of the Episcopal burial service, no words of eulogy were spoken, but the tearful eyes and expression of general bereavement among all classes in the assemblage bespoke the most fitting remembrance of one in whom youth and age alike vanished friend. The floral tokens of remembrance were beautiful. Henry Irving sent a large base of English ivy, exotic foliage and passion vine streamers, bearing a book in Mabel Morrison and Cornelia Cook roses, with orchids, illies of the valley and ferns. Across the open page in purple violets was the word "Shakespeare." From bearant the cover fell a bookmark of lawender ribbon bearing the words: "A well-graced actor." J. H. McVicker, of Chicago, sent a standing wreath of ivy, broken at one side with a sickle composed of Niphetos roses cutting through the cleft. Tribute were also sent by John Gilbert, Annie M. Clarke, R. M. Field, George Wilson, H. M. Pitt, Mrs. H. M. Pitt, Eisie Leslie, Tommy Russell, Edward Harrigan, Nat C. Goodwin, W. J. Florence, Mrs. Thomas Barry, Sol Smith Russell, and others. The burial was at Mount Auburn. The floral tokens of remembran extent. A large number of workmen are digging away the ruins, but they will not be able to get at the beer in less than four or five days. The ice machine is uninjured and the pipes through which the cold air is forced to keep the beer at the right teniperature seem to be all right, though they are covered up and it is impossible to tell for certain whether they are working all right or not. Should they be uninjured and doing their work properly, it is expected that the beer will be as good as ever when it is got at. But should the pipes be disarranged, the beer would spoil and the loss will be $150,000 to $160,000. This is nearly all covered by insurance and the insurance men were the most anxious one about the place restorday.
